Kindergarten was a year away when tragedy left us both dealing with grief. Battling depression, he was too distracted to take interest in preschool. I was not sure that he would make it through that first year of school. At United Way's Kindergarten Countdown Camp he made new friends, while learning the skills and routines to set him up for success. I discovered that I didn’t have to fight alone.